Dōgon by Kwame Onwuachi

Salamander Washington DC’s new signature restaurant, Dōgon by Kwame Onwuachi, was designed by the acclaimed architecture firm Modellus Novus. The renowned chef made his highly anticipated return to the nation’s capital with a concept inspired by D.C. Surveyor Benjamin Banneker and his heritage to the West African Dogon tribe. Pronounced “Doh-gon,” the restaurant serves vibrant cuisine through an Afro-Caribbean lens, drawing from Onwuachi’s unique Nigerian, Jamaican, Trinidadian, and Creole background.

Set against a captivating ambiance enriched by a soulful playlist, Dōgon invites guests to indulge in exquisite dishes that celebrate this rich heritage. The restaurant is open Tuesday to Saturday from 5 pm to 10 pm, offering vibrant cuisine and specially curated cocktails.

About Chef Kwame Onwuachi

Onwuachi, who currently owns Tatiana in New York City, has penned multiple books, like his successful memoir Notes from a Young Black Chef, and the bestselling cookbook My America: Recipes from a Young Black Chef. He has also been a contestant and a judge on Bravo’s Top Chef.

In 2019, he was acclaimed by Esquire as its Chef of the Year, recognized by Food & Wine as one of its Best New Chefs, and named by the James Beard Foundation as “Rising Star Chef of the Year.” Tatiana has been hailed as the city’s best restaurant by the New York Times and received multiple stellar reviews.

“The time is right to return to D.C., and I can’t think of a more appropriate location to open a new restaurant that speaks to the character and lineage of D.C. than at this storied Salamander property. As a child, I spent summers in D.C. with my grandfather, a professor of pan African studies at Howard University, who shared his passion for the city with me. I fell in love and can’t wait to return.”
